IGNITE YOUR PASSION FOR QUEER CINEMA.

RBC Royal Bank®

Congratulations to the organizers of this year's Inside Out Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival. RBC® is delighted to join you once again as the Presenting Sponsor of the festival.

We're thrilled that this year's festival is taking place at the new TIFF Bell Lightbox. It's only fitting that the premiere venue for screening films in Canada should be home to a world-class film festival that has secured such a meaningful place in Toronto's diverse cultural and community landscape.

As the lead banker to the media and entertainment industry in Canada for close to 30 years and an active supporter of arts and culture in Toronto, RBC recognizes the power of artistic expression to create an inclusive environment that brings out the best in everyone. Few festivals do this as well as Inside Out, which has been celebrating stories, challenging attitudes, changing lives, and championing the voice and vision of LGBT filmmakers for more than 20 years.

Enjoy this year's films. I hope they generate active discussion, bring us greater understanding, and engage and entertain us all.

Regional President, Greater Toronto Region

Ignite your passion.

If I am honest, my passion for film really only developed in my mid-twenties. Movies were always a part of my life—whether my siblings and I were crowding around the television in our family basement to watch holiday viewings of The Wizard of Oz and The Ten Commandments, or I was heading off on Friday nights with my friends to Oakville's only cinema. But it wasn't until my first Inside Out that I thought of film as anything other than entertainment.

During that first Festival, while watching a series of short films and videos, I began to appreciate not only film as art but the astounding power the medium has to educate and inform. Today, living in an accepting metropolitan city, it is easy to become oblivious to the issues and the struggles that queers around the world face every day. For me, this is one of Inside Out's greatest roles. Where else in the city do we have the opportunity to watch films that deal with the struggles facing women in Africa (Cameroon; Difficult Love) or the early days of the AIDS epidemic (We Where Here).

Moreover, in an age where it is easy to download a movie from the Internet or order one from TV, Inside Out remains unique, providing an opportunity for our diverse communities to come together, watch film, and engage in discussion, debate and celebration.

There are some significant changes for the 2011 Festival. We say goodbye, and thank you, to the ROM and Isabel Bader Theatres as we move our primary Festival screenings to TIFF Bell Lightbox. We are excited to strengthen our relationship with TIFF and present our Festival in their state-of-the-art facility. We are happy to continue our partnership with Buddies in Bad Times Theatre, where we will present community screenings, the Outsiders series and our annual Local Heroes Party.

As always, thank you to everyone who helps make this Festival happen, including our funders, sponsors, donors, members and advertisers. My heartfelt gratitude to the brilliant team with whom I am fortunate to work every day, and to our volunteer Board of Directors and Advisory Board for their commitment, expertise and advice. Thanks as well to all our office and Festival volunteers, who dedicate thousands of hours to make this event possible. And an enormous thank you to all the artists for sharing their talent and imagination, and for allowing us to put their artistry on the big screen for all to experience.

Finally, a special thanks to you, our audience, for sharing your passion for Inside Out and for continuing to support the Festival.

Enjoy—and I will see you in the dark.

Scott Ferguson

Executive Director

New venues. New initiatives. New sidebars. The only things you'll recognize at this year's Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival are the great programming and the boundless community spirit.

As the Festival moves into its 21st incarnation, we will showcase the diverse stories of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people by presenting works from 33 countries, making the Festival more global in reach than ever before.

The International Focus, a mainstay of the Festival that will shine a spotlight across the ocean to the United Kingdom, has increased in scope and stature, and will bring many outstanding premieres to Toronto, among them the much-anticipated Sarah Waters adaptation, The Night Watch, and the long-overdue Christopher Isherwood memoir, Christopher and His Kind.

We will also be setting our sights on another part of the world, with 24 Hours in the Middle East, which offers up features, shorts and special guests in order to present a more complex picture of the region—something mainstream media still seems incapable of doing. As part of this series, we will draw attention to filmmaker Jafar Panahi's sentencing in Iran, screening his powerful Offside, a critique of gender inequality in his country.

Thanks to the generous support of OUTtv, Inside Out will be launching a new program—the Inside Out OUTtv Film and Video Post-Production Fund—in support of Canadian film- and video makers. When seen in relation to Inside Out's existing scholarship and training programs, this initiative will complete the circle, making us a key player in shaping the future of film and video production in Canada.

Whether fighting for our rights, celebrating our achievements or telling our personal stories, the Festival is still the most important venue in the country for queer filmmakers. But it's the audience who make our festival great, and we can't wait to welcome all 35,000 of you into our new home at TIFF Bell Lightbox.

For 21 years, Inside Out has been bringing together Toronto's LGBT community in celebration of the best queer film from Canada and around the world. We are a not-for-profit registered charity that supports the production, promotion and exhibition of film and video works made by and about LGBT people, reflecting diverse voices and deeply human stories on screen. Through our Festivals in Toronto and Ottawa, our youth initiatives and our year-round community partnerships, Inside Out is engaged, every day, in challenging attitudes and changing lives.

Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival

In 1991, Inside Out celebrated its first film and video festival with a small community of people who yearned to see film and video created by and about lesbians, gays, bisexuals and trans (LGBT) people. Currently the largest event of its kind in Canada, the Festival entertains film buffs of all stripes, showcasing the best and most diverse work of interest to LGBT communities. Taking place over 11 days, the Festival draws crowds of 35,000 to screenings, artist talks, panel discussions, installations and parties that highlight more than 200 films and videos from Canada and around the world.

Ottawa-Gatineau LGBT Film and Video Festival

Since 2008, Inside Out has produced a four-day festival in the Ottawa-Gatineau region. The Festival showcases the best queer cinema from Canada and around the world. The event has received a warm welcome from the queer community in the area and has been well-attended over the past four years, the 2010 Festival experiencing a forty percent increase at the box office.

Queer Video Mentorship Project

In 1998, with the support of Charles Street Video, Inside Out initiated the Queer Youth Digital Video Project in order to provide opportunities for participants to learn video production in a supportive atmosphere. Queer youth under the age of 25 were mentored through the process of making their first videos—from storyboarding and shooting to post-production and editing. The works are screened at the Festival and many go on to play at festivals around the globe. Each year, the videos are compiled on DVD and distributed free to schools and community organizations.

In celebration of the Festival's 20th Anniversary, Inside Out initiated a special edition of the project for 2010, entitled the Legacy Video Project. The Project was transformed into a multi-generational program consisting of four youth and three adults over the age of 55. For 2011, the project continues to be a multi-generational program and has taken on a new name—Queer Video Mentorship Project (QVMP). To date, more than 80 new artists have created work through the Project.

Mark S. Bonham Scholarship for Queer Studies in Film and Video

Inaugurated in 2002, this annual $5,000 cash scholarship assists a Canadian student who identifies as lesbian, gay, bisexual or trans and who wishes to pursue post-secondary studies in the field of film or video. The first scholarship was awarded in September 2002 to Adam Garnet Jones from Vancouver. Subsequent recipients are Mary Fogarty, Christopher Sanchez, Jung Kim, Cam Matamoros, Jo Simalaya Alcampo, Rachel Smyth and Jordan Tannahill.

Inside Out is pleased to announce Amy Dyck as the 2010 recipient of the annual Mark S. Bonham Scholarship for Queer Studies in Film and Video. Amy is enrolled in her second year of Film and Video Production at the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology.

Inside Out OUTtv Film and Video Post-Production Fund

We are pleased to be launching this new program in conjunction with OUTtv. The Fund will provide valuable cash resources to film and video artists whose projects are in post-production. The call for applications will open in June with an August deadline and recipients will be announced in the fall. Works must be completed by March 31 of the following year in order to be considered for programming in the Toronto Festival.

Congratulations!

Dear Friends,

I would like to convey my best wishes to the Inside Out Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival on celebrating 21 years of challenging attitudes and changing lives through film and video!

Toronto is privileged to be home to a film festival that has been a groundbreaking annual event honouring and showcasing LGBT culture and life. The Inside Out Film and Video Festival has become an integral contributor to the cultural fabric of our city. The annual festival is an important outlet and medium for LGBT stories, voices, and art. As an organization, Inside Out also provides an important resource to the development of LGBT artists through their scholarship and mentorship programs.

As a proud member of the LGBT community, I understand the value of telling our stories and celebrating our achievements. I have attended the festival for many years and it is always a highlight in my cultural calendar. I am looking forward to enjoying the films at this year's festival!

Happy Screenings!

A PERSONAL MESSAGE FROM THE PREMIER

On behalf of the Government of Ontario, I am delighted to extend warm greetings to everyone attending the 21st annual Inside Out Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival.

Ontario's strength lies in its ability to celebrate diversity and embrace difference. Film and video play an important role in giving voice to that cherished diversity and in reflecting the inclusive society that we have all worked hard to create. Since 1991, the Inside Out Festival has been presenting the films of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered artists from around the globe, while promoting the values of mutual respect and understanding.

I commend all those who work hard to make this festival possible, including the dedicated staff, volunteers and board members of Inside Out, and the talented artists who tell their stories through film and video. I would also like to thank the audiences who have enthusiastically supported this event for the past 21 years.

Please accept my best wishes for an enjoyable and memorable festival.

Dalton McGuinty
 Premier

International Jury

MARCO BERGER (Buenos Aires) was born in 1977 in Buenos Aires and studied at the Universidad del Cine. His short film, The Watch, screened at Cannes and Sundance. Plan B, his first feature film, competed in the festivals of Rome, Havana and Toulouse. Plan B also won the inaugural Bill Sherwood Award for Best First Feature at the Toronto LGBT Film and Video Festival in 2010. His second feature, Ausente (Absent), was awarded the prestigious Teddy Award for Best Feature at the Berlin International Film Festival in 2011.

MICHAEL GAMILLA (Rochester) is the Programming Director of ImageOut, the Rochester LGBT Film and Video Festival, where he is able to exercise his great passion for films and volunteering for the LGBT community. He also loves writing about the gay entertainment scene. Recently, Michael served on the Teddy Jury at the Berlin International Film Festival, and in February was hired as a Berlinale festival blogger by Siegestaule, the leading gay publication in Berlin. Michael has been coming to Inside Out since 2003 and is honoured to have an official duty at this year's festival.

KIRSTINE MØLGAARD (Copenhagen) is the Festival Director of MIX COPENHAGEN|LesbianGayBiTrans Film Festival. Kirstine Mølgaard has worked for the festival since 2007 and as festival director since 2010. In 2010, MIX COPENHAGEN celebrated its 25th anniversary and changed its name from Copenhagen Gay & Lesbian Film Festival to MIX COPENHAGEN. The change of name was prompted by their wish to emphasize more clearly that the festival is far more diverse than the term "gay & lesbian" suggests, and has been this way for quite a while now.

When an unexpected tragedy risks exposing Miguel's clandestine relationship to his homophobic village neighbours, he must face the truth and decide how to move forward.

The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister

James Kent UK 2010 video 90 min

Winner of last year's RBC Royal Bank Audience Award for Best Feature, this worldwide hit is sure to incite some fervent bodice ripping with its bold, true story of Anne Lister (1791-1840), who was referred to as Britain's first modern lesbian and who defies society's conventions by pursuing the woman of her dreams. Anne details her life and Sapphic loves in a four-million-word diary that she writes in elaborate code in order to keep her feelings secret. Beautifully shot and showcasing a superb supporting cast, the film captures the sweeping romance and unbridled passion of classic British novels, while uncovering a hidden chapter of lesbian history.

24 Hours in the Middle East

24 This special focus on the Middle East takes us to a place that, for most Canadians, exists solely on news channels. Cultural perspectives from the region rarely find a forum on television (and even less often in the multiplex), leaving festivals to fill an immense void.

So what is it like to be queer in the Middle East today? Many of the films address this issue head-on, but the answers are diverse and surprising. Beirut, Tehran, Istanbul, Ramallah and many other places come into focus, depicting a region that, while often painted in black and white, exists in shades of gray.

The Diaspora is well represented with works from France, Germany, Canada and the United States, illuminating the realities of Middle Eastern cultures wrestling with issues of sexuality, faith, racism and immigration in Europe and North America.

As part of the series and following the Middle East Shorts program, Samar Habib, author of Female Homosexuality in the Middle East: Histories and Representations, will present a talk.

Works made by filmmakers from the Middle East are essential to our understanding of cultures that are broadly marginalized and stereotyped in Canada. 24 Hours in the Middle East hopes to counter mainstream media with better representation and more in-depth discussions, painting a vivid, more greatly detailed picture of the Middle East.

International Focus on the UK

UK This year, our International Focus will feature the United Kingdom, along with many Canadian and North American premieres. Historically, filmmakers in the UK have taken bold steps in adding to queer representation, on both the large and small screen. Works as diverse as My Beautiful Laundrette, The Crying Game and Queer as Folk, have set the bar high for filmmakers everywhere, and 2011 is certainly no exception.

In the world of television, the UK is unparalleled in terms of quality, and the Festival is thrilled to showcase six new feature films and television series from the BBC alone, including the breakout television show, Lip Service, and the highly anticipated adaptation of Sarah Waters', The Night Watch.

In celebration of this focus, we will present as our Centrepiece Gala the feature film Weekend, which garnered international buzz following its world premiere at South by Southwest (SXSW) Film Conference and Festival in Austin, Texas. Winner of the audience award for Best Feature at SXSW, the film is sure to melt your heart, its love-at-first-sight tale told with an adroit mixture of humanity, realism and sex appeal.

Inside Out will be travelling to Toronto neighbourhoods east and west this year, with a pre-festival screening at the Fox Theatre of The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister, winner of last year's RBC Royal Bank Audience Award for Best Feature. Throughout the Festival, we will be peppering our shorts programs with acclaimed works from the UK.

The International Focus will be the biggest and brightest spotlight in Inside Out's history. So big in fact, we invited the Queen.

The Outsiders

O The Outsiders is Inside Out's permanent home for experimentation in film and video, bringing a wide range of practitioners together to redefine our notions of the moving image. From experimental erotica to innovative animation, the series is a feast for the mind, eyes and soul.

In the international program Animate This!, artists throw traditions out the window by using non-traditional means or cutting-edge techniques to bring their visions to life.

Art and Soul is a program of shorts by and about women artists from around the world. Experimental film superstar Barbara Hammer rubs shoulders with our very own Deanna Bowen in this program that celebrates the revolutionary power of art activism.

In the film Mother Earth (Tierra Madre), documentary and fiction meld into a scathing critique of high capitalism at the USA/Mexico border and its impact on the people living there.

Much More Pussy is an energetic mix of pornography and performance art by the Paris-based troublemaker Emilie Jouvét.

We hope you'll join us in paying tribute to the courageous artists who push boundaries and make us see the world anew.

Icon Documentary Series

I Returning for a fourth year, the Icon Documentary Series features films on larger-than-life queer icons.

From homegrown hero Bruce LaBruce to fashion icon Yves Saint Laurent, we bring the best documentaries from festivals around the world, including Sundance and the Berlin International Film Festival.

Shedding light on some of the most important cultural icons of our time, the series will include Q and As with directors and many premieres. These engaging and sometimes provocative portraits cast a unique perspective on their work, their play, and their private lives.

At once educational and entertaining, the films in this series will cement your admiration of queer icons and introduce you to cult figures you never knew existed.

Loose Cannons (Mine Vaganti)

Ferzan Ozpetek

Italy 2010 35mm 110 min

Inside Out favourite Ferzan Ozpetek (Ignorant Fairies; Saturn in Opposition) returns to the Festival with a light-hearted tale of family obligation and repressed desire that is as playful and sunny as a weekend on the Italian Riviera.

Tommaso is the youngest son of the well-to-do and ultra-conservative Cantone family, who own a pasta factory in Puglia. He returns home for an important family dinner at which his father plans to hand over the business to Tommaso and his brother Antonio.

But Tommaso has a comfortable life in Rome as an aspiring writer and a steady relationship with his boyfriend Marco—a life he has kept secret from his family. He has no desire to move back to his hometown or to give up his writing career, so he plans to announce to his family at the dinner that he is gay. That evening, however, just as Tommaso begins his speech, he is upstaged by his brother, who, to everyone's surprise, reveals his own secret!

Antonio is promptly disowned and their father Vincenzo collapses from a heart attack. With the family in a state of turmoil, Tommaso reluctantly steps in to run the factory with Alba, the daughter of their new business partner.

The comedy follows Tommaso as he balances running the firm, consoling his outraged family and keeping his homosexuality a secret in case the news altogether kills his stricken father. A surprise visit from some of Tommaso's friends, including boyfriend Marco, uncovers some well-hidden family secrets and helps to change some long-held beliefs among the family.

Loose Cannons is a witty, penetrating drama, beautifully acted by its ensemble cast. The film takes a lighthearted approach, revealing each family member's quirks in a story that meanders through an emotional terrain of unspoken feelings that are played out against a backdrop of sumptuous beauty.

No Gravity

Silvia Casalino

Germany 2011 video 60 minutes

No Gravity is a documentary essay about the history of women in space and the relationship between gender and technology.

In 1960, a research program—the Mercury 13 program—was initiated in the United States with the objective of sending 13 women to the moon. After one year of successful training, the astronauts were abruptly dismissed, none of these women ever travelling into space. The documentary tells the stories of women who have dedicated their lives to the space endeavour, establishing their position in the male-dominated world of space technology.

In interviews with female astronauts that include Claudie Haigneré, the first European woman in space; feminist theorist Donna Haraway; the Mercury 13 women, and the icons of Russian space travel, Silvia Casalino investigates why women struggle to achieve equal opportunities with their male counterparts; what has been achieved in the field of aerospace, and what the prospects are for the future.

Director Silvia Casalino, a young lesbian space engineer, inserts herself into the narrative by training as an astronaut for a mission to Mars, imagining the first human step on Mars as a woman's.

House of Boys

Jean-Claude Schlim

Luxembourg/Germany 2009 video 113 min

It's 1984 and starry-eyed young Luxembourger Frank (Layke Anderson) decides to leave the comfort of his Wham!-poster bedroom for the burgeoning Amsterdam gay scene.

Soon homeless and strapped for cash, Frank finds a job at the sexy cabaret, House of Boys. The club is ruled with tough love by Madame (portrayed by cult movie star Udo Kier, whose campastically horrifying German drag numbers are one of the film's key pleasures). The Cabaret-style club is a colourful Neverland where impetuous go-go boys, hustlers and drag queens entertain drug dealers and closet cases, while living together in bitchy, sleazy harmony.

Just as the club's nominal straight guy (Benn Northover) becomes receptive to Frank's advances, the outside world intrudes—a world where Ronald Reagan is still president of the United States and where doctors are starting to worry about a disease that is first described as “gay cancer.” It feels like the party's over. But in response to adversity, the bonds of club life solidify into those of a chosen family and Frank finds himself living a life very different from the one he dreamed about.

The film, which also stars British actor Stephen Fry as the compassionate Dr. Marsh, is a highly stylized and hedonistic ode to a place and time of innocence and sexual enjoyment, immediately prior to the AIDS epidemic.

The Real Anne Lister

Matthew Hill

UK 2010 video 60 min

The Real Anne Lister is an engrossing and comprehensive companion documentary to 2010 Inside Out Audience Award winner, The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister, a film that examines the mysteries revealed in Lister's remarkable four million-word diary. The documentary paints a compelling portrait of a worldly socialite and land-owning lesbian who, although living in the buttoned-up Victorian era, was one thoroughly modern lady.

British television presenter and comedian Sue Perkin is fascinated by Anne's story. A lesbian with a passion for history, Perkin understands the significance of Anne's journals. The documentary follows the host on her journey across the Yorkshire countryside where she brings Anne Lister's diary to life while painting a vivid portrait of a very complex character.

What Perkin finds is a woman not only notable for detailing her lesbian affairs, but remarkable as a progressive woman studying geology and engineering, climbing mountains in Russia and Spain, taking lessons in human dissection in Paris, and who, at the forefront of the Industrial Revolution, transforms her inherited land into coal mines while beating out male competitors along the way.

Lister lived a passionate life of immense social, economic and political change. Not one to withdraw, she ultimately found triumph in gaining financial independence, which allowed her to live an unorthodox life and become a leading light of her time, paving the way for women everywhere.

Man At Bath (Homme au bain)

Christophe Honoré

France 2010 video 72 min

Those who are familiar with the...ahem...less arty work of French porn star François Sagat know his key attribute: a body so amazingly sculpted you can hardly believe it's real. After starring in Bruce LaBruce's L.A. Zombie, Sagat is (mostly) naked again in this cool, detached meditation on a French couple who have either broken up or achieved a Zen level of non-monogamy. (You decide.)

Surrounded by the non-porn bodies of indie-film actors, Sagat's bulk and beauty look strange and awkward. His body certainly doesn't earn his character, Emmanuel, any respect, and he's told to evacuate his apartment before hipster boyfriend, Omar (Omar Ben Sellem), returns from a trip to New York. Sentenced to a kind of limbo, Emmanuel humbly offers his sexual services to a neighbour (played by cult writer Denis Cooper) only to suffer one of the most jaded, objectifying rejections imaginable. Hooking up with a series of guys, the porn star is more focused on getting them out of the apartment than on anything else.

Meanwhile, Omar is shooting scenes of his holiday in New York, which include hanging out with Chiara Mastroianni (daughter of Catherine Deneuve and Marcello Mastroianni), playing herself, and a handsome young Montrealer (Dustin Segura-Suarez), who comes back to Omar's hotel room for some fun.

Bloomington

Fernanda Cardoso

USA 2010 video 83 min

Jackie Kirk is a fresh-faced blond starting her freshman year at Bloomington University, but from her first steps on campus it is clear that Jackie is not just any ordinary student. After co-starring in a hit television show, Neptune 67, Jackie wants only to make some real friends and get an education. But her classmates alienate her with their scorn, and Jackie struggles to prove herself beyond her fame.

Enter Professor Catherine Stark, a specialist in Abnormal Psychology, about whom the student body imagine all sorts of salacious mythologies. Despite, or perhaps because of, rumors that Professor Stark is a lesbian vampire who seduces students of any sex (killing them post-coitally), Jackie is immediately attracted. After their first brief exchange at a psychology department mixer, Catherine and Jackie begin a passionate affair.

But an unexpected call from Hollywood asking Jackie to audition for the feature film version of Neptune 67 turns her reality at Bloomington on its head. Ostracized by her peers, confused about her sexuality, torn between her past and her future selves, Jackie struggles to find her identity and her place in the world. Soft, glossy photography, sharp dialogue and modern stylings make Fernanda Cardoso's Bloomington an eye-candy love story well worth its 83 minutes.

Miss Tacuarembó

Martin Sastre

Uruguay/Argentina 2010 video 94 min

Artist, filmmaker and provocateur, Martin Sastre, raised a fuss among Catholic groups in Latin America and Spain with his debut feature, Miss Tacuarembó. Anyone who might be offended by a satirical depiction of a Christ-themed park where patrons shoot at Judas for prizes and ride the Virgin's Carousel should give this one a pass. Everyone else, however, will find the frothy, music-driven Miss Tacuarembó a pop culture confection.

Natalie (played as an adult by Uruguayan superstar actress and singer Natalia Oreiro) and her best friend Carlos (Diego Reinhold) are bored, bored, bored living in their hometown of Tacuarembó. They dream of Hollywood...or at least Buenos Aires. The film flits back and forth in time between their 80s-obsessed childhood—where they're tormented by a church lady so scary that even the nuns are afraid of her—and their adulthood, where they work at Christ Park, still longing for fame. But the past that Natalie flees might be the way forward.

Sastre's diva-obsessed casting is as playful as the film itself. An unrecognizable Oreiro plays the church lady, Candida, in the childhood scenes; Spanish cult star Rossy de Palma camps it up as a TV-show host, and the real-life soap opera actress that Natalie idolizes, Jeannette Rodríguez, makes a cameo.

Different From Whom? (Diverso da chi?)

Umberto Carteni

Italy 2009 video 102 min

Politics makes strange bedfellows, which is certainly the case in Umberto Carteni's comedic debut feature, Different From Whom? Piero is the openly gay progressive candidate in the mayoral election in the small town of Udine, Italy. His chief opponent is a bigoted right-wing candidate, who builds physical walls around his community to keep foreigners and drug dealers confined to their various neighbourhoods. Piero (played by Italian sex symbol Luca Argentero) is more interested in building community—for gays and lesbians, in particular.

Party bosses appoint Adele as Peiro's running mate, who is a conservative, family-values politician. But the two candidates are immediately at each other's throats. In order to thaw their icy relationship and improve their public image, Piero and Adele are encouraged to spend more time together. The fractious duo, however, are shocked to discover a growing attraction to one another, despite Piero's love for his long-term partner, Remo.

A full-blown affair ensues, each contender hilariously trying to end the pairing while attempting to hide their trysts from friends, colleagues and the press. The results are predictably disastrous. Different From Whom is a delightful farce about desire, personal values and politics—in and out of the bedroom.

The Advocate for Fagdom

Angélique Bosio

France 2011 video 91 min

Canadian filmmaker Bruce LaBruce has made waves around the world with his unique artistic vision, never failing to ignite debate.

The Advocate for Fagdom is a love letter of sorts to the founder of the Queercore movement, featuring interviews with the likes of John Waters, Harmony Korine, Gus Van Sant and Richard Kern. Although the subjects shed great insight on La Bruce's work, it is the archival footage of him as a young man on cable access television that proves most endearing. We feel as if we're witnessing the birth of a remarkably funny provocateur.

Coming out of the punk movement in Toronto, Bruce LaBruce quickly became the enfant terrible of the Canadian film scene, with his transgressive aesthetic and no-holds-barred attitude to sex.

This enchanting documentary takes a long-overdue look at the world of the popular Bruce LaBruce and will have even his harshest critics reconsidering LaBruce's place in the history of cinema.

A Montreal Girl (La Fille de Montréal)

Jeanne Crépeau

Canada 2010 video 92 min

A Montréal Girl tells the story of Ariane Rondeau, a 46-year-old artist and filmmaker who has lived in the same rent-controlled apartment for the last 25 years. There are many things Ariane loves about her small one-bedroom flat—the private view across the rooftops, the distant oaks and maples, the morning light that brightens the kitchen, and the neighbourhood merchants who have become family: the butchers, the pharmacist and the flower shop owners.

Ariane has no children, her parents are dead and her loving girlfriend lives an ocean away in Paris. The artist is surrounded by her many belongings and a small circle of loyal friends. When she receives an eviction notice, Ariane, rather than pay twelve hundred dollars in legal fees to fight her landlord, decides to move.

Jeanne Crépeau's A Montreal Girl is a post-modern biography that blends creative use of time and space with the true story of Ariane's uprooting. As Ariane struggles to find a large affordable apartment in Montreal, she sorts through twenty-five years of accumulated art, love, politics and personal history, and in the process opens up to the possibilities of the future.

Christopher and His Kind

Geoffrey Sax

UK 2011 video 90 min

The decadent Berlin cabaret scene is in full swing when a young and wide-eyed Christopher Isherwood (author of The Single Man) arrives in the city to stay with his close friend and occasional lover, poet WH Auden.

To Isherwood's reserved English sensibility, the city's thriving gay subculture is intoxicating. But Christopher soon finds himself heartbroken after the failure of a hopeless love affair, and sets out on a process of self-discovery, forging an identity and a place for himself amid the chaos and carnality of 1930's Berlin.

Matt Smith, the young actor best known for his role in the British television series Doctor Who, stars as the aspiring writer who is escaping repressed English society for hedonistic, politically unstable Berlin. Isherwood eventually meets actress and singer Jean Ross, the inspiration for the character Sally Bowles, famously played by Liza Minnelli in the 1972 film, Cabaret, which, along with the Broadway musical, is based on Isherwood's The Berlin Stories.

In lavish period detail, the film transports us to the wild cabarets of Berlin and, occasionally, into the author's bedroom. Sexy and smart, Christopher and His Kind is sure to become another classic from the BBC.

Much More Pussy

Emilie Jovet

France/Germany 2011 video 90 min

This vibrant sexumentary follows a troupe of French and American feminist, sex-positive performance artists as they travel across France in 2009 on their Too Much Pussy tour. Audience members are invited to view one artist's cervix, and then offered bites of a banana that is nestled in her cervical clamps. Madison Young's sultry self-examination of her breasts culminates in lit-candlestick masturbation. Resoundingly, the Too Much Pussy tour focuses on the reclamation of female sex and sexuality as something normalized and demystified, embraced as something powerful and beautiful, and not to be scorned.

While Jovet's companion film, Too Much Pussy, is a straight-up tour movie replete with van banter, backstage politics and live performances, Much More Pussy is the XXX version of the tour, complete with several additional scenes of hot queer porn. The artists on tour experiment with each other, playing in different couples and groups as they explore their explosively diverse sexualities—exhibiting vivid scenes of knife play and themes of degradation, along with various other predilections.

Much More Pussy more than delivers on its titular claims, while exploring radical politics, sex-positivity, feminism, and queer sex in all its definitions. Jovet's portrait is sexy, informative, powerful and hot, truly displaying the filmmaker's talent for feminist pornography. If Too Much Pussy was a rip-rollicking political road movie, Much More Pussy is a pulse-quickenning political sex movie that is sure to thrill.

Rosie O'Donnell also talks with her daughter, Vivienne Rose, about how their family, which includes sister Chelsea and brothers Parker and Blake, came about. ## Shahada

Burhan Qurbani

Germany 2010 video 89 min

Burhan Qurbani's debut feature, Shahada, is a rich and riveting episodic drama that follows the lives of three modern Muslim Berliners as they struggle to reconcile an ancient faith with their complicated contemporary lives.

Maryam is a single nineteen-year-old, intoxicated by the strobe-lit, chemically enhanced underbelly of Berlin's club scene. The daughter of a liberal Imam, Maryam lives a bifurcated life—one side of her wanting to be good in the eyes of her father and her faith, the other reckoning with an unwanted pregnancy and its subsequent and illicit backdoor abortion.

Sammi and Daniel work together at a market hall that mainly employs immigrants, and the two men attend Koran classes with Maryam's father Vedat. Daniel is frequently picked on and it is no secret that he is gay. What Sammi originally perceives as a simple friendship between them soon evolves into an aching, passionate desire, and he is terrorized by his overwhelming feelings and what his faith has always taught him.

Ismail is a police officer and family man in his mid-thirties. While checking the paperwork of employees at Sammi and Daniel's market hall, Ismail is confronted by Leyla, a dramatic figure from his past. The encounter whips Ismail into a spiraling frenzy as he is wrought by guilt, shame and self-loathing.

Shahada is a thoughtful, understated investigation of an attempt to reconcile our imperfect selves with the tenets of our personal faiths. Stunning photography and believable acting from all the players make Shahada an emotional cinematic experience that is not to be missed.

What's the Name of the Dame?

Allan Neuwirth

USA 2010 video 84 min

"No more bloody ABBA!" may have been a common reaction to the train-wreck movie version of Mamma Mia! but in What's the Name of the Dame? the songs of the Swedish super-group are given a modern and thoroughly camp reworking by a gaggle of exuberantly talented drag queens.

This joyous and heartfelt documentary follows nine over-the-top drag divas—among them Hedda Lettuce, Edie, Cashetta, Sade Pendarvis, and Yolanda—each a gifted vocalist who reinterprets some of ABBA's greatest songs with humor and style.

Classics include SOS; Knowing Me, Knowing You; The Winner Takes It All and, of course, Dancing Queen, and are given a unique, glittery drag makeover, transforming the hits in styles that range from country and western, rhythm and blues, and Broadway ballad.

Interspersed between music videos of the new interpretations and footage from the recording sessions are interviews with ABBA-lovin' luminaries Christine Baranski, Graham Norton, Joan Rivers and ABBA's own fuzzy bear Benny Anderson, who provide insight into the group's lasting appeal and cult status among the gay community.

Paying tribute to the band's feel good legacy, What's the Name of the Dame? is a quirky documentary that perfectly captures all the fun, wit and charm of this group of wildly talented dames.

Lost in the Crowd

Lost in the Crowd

Susi Graf

USA 2010 video 61 min

The story of a handful of homeless youth—a story rarely told in the public sphere—is the emotional backbone of Lost in the Crowd, Susi Graf's powerful documentary about an often overlooked and seldom explored population. Shot in New York City between 2003 and 2008, Lost in the Crowd follows transgender, transsexual, gay, lesbian and bi-sexual youth living on the streets, many of whom are HIV+, involved in sex work, and survivors of rape, rejection and abuse.

The film delves not only into the particulars of each youth's history, but explores the wider issues and the ways in which these adolescents are let down by the societal structures that surround them. Queer youth flee in droves from their oppressive, often dangerous hometowns, searching for the illusory freedom of New York City. When they can't find work or affordable housing, they are forced into shelters and sleeping on the streets.

Several of the players are involved in the ballroom scene, a camp, underground performance/art/dance/drag ring, which provides a safe haven for hundreds of creative, vibrant souls, where these disenfranchised youth compete in celebration of their truly diverse individuality.

Lost in the Crowd is an honest, bittersweet portrait of the struggles and triumphs of some of society's most vulnerable and resilient members. It is a story of survival and strength; of resolving to be true to oneself no matter the cost. Spanning the years, jail terms, HIV+ test results, reunions with and rejections from family and friends, Lost in the Crowd gives voice to one of our most silenced populations.

Making the Boys

Crayton Robey

USA 2009 Video 90 min

What might have been a straightforward documentary on the writer of The Boys in the Band and his classic play about a group of gay men who come together for a friend's birthday party turns out to include a rich portrait of post-Stonewall New York City life and Hollywood glamour.

The Broadway premiere of The Boys in the Band in April, 1968, was followed by more than 1,000 performances, and Mart Crowley, its young playwright, became the immediate toast of the Great White Way.

Interviews with Edward Albee, Robert Wagner, Larry Kramer, Dominick Dunne, Tony Kushner, among others, reveal both the positive and negative reactions garnered by the play and its William Friedkin-directed film adaptation.

In a documentary packed with interesting tidbits, one of the most captivating moments comes with the revelation that Crowley was also personal assistant to actress Natalie Wood. Archival home movies provide an intimate glimpse of weekend beach parties at Roddy McDowell's Malibu home where the guest list included Rock Hudson, Tab Hunter, Sal Mineo, Lauren Bacall, Judy Garland, and Wood.

The documentary isn't all sunshine and liberation, however. Crowley spent years living in excess, and many of the cast members discovered that finding work was difficult after having played gay in such a defining way. The fate of the actor who portrayed the cowboy hustler is particularly tragic.

Overall, Making the Boys is a rich and entertaining portrait of an artist and of his career-defining work that helped break open the closet door for the LGBT community by proudly and defiantly screaming, "Who do you have to fuck to get a drink around here!"

Together (Zai Yi Qi)

Zhao Liang

People's Republic of China 2011 video 83 min

Together is an intimate and powerful documentary that provides a behind-the-scenes look at the making of Chinese director Gu Changwei's upcoming feature film, Life is a Miracle, while exposing the discrimination faced by people living with HIV/AIDS in China.

Casting two well-known Chinese actors, Zhang Ziyi (Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon) and Aaron Kwok, as the leads in his new film, Gu decided to hire people living with HIV/AIDS who could play supporting roles and work as members of the crew. Zhao Liang's documentary records Gu's search, but the resulting film provides much more than a glimpse of behind-the-scenes events.

In China, the general population knows very little about HIV/AIDS, and people living with the disease are often ostracized. This fear of discrimination forces most patients to hide the fact that they are HIV positive. Zhao documents the interactions of cast and crew as they come face-to-face with colleagues who are living with the disease. Initially, many react with fear because of their ignorance.

Through a series of information sessions held on set and through the sense of community fostered during film production, close bonds gradually develop between those living with HIV/AIDS and the other crew members. When the lighting stand-in is forced to leave the shoot because of his deteriorating condition, his tearful farewell makes clear that he has provided a human face to HIV/AIDS and that he has become a friend whose emotional and physical pain the crew share.

Together provides a personal glimpse into the stigma and prejudice that still surround people living with HIV/AIDS, and offers a thoughtful, highly emotional look into one of China's most pressing social concerns.

Harvest (Stadt Land Fluss)

Benjamin Cantu

Germany 2011 video 85 min

Brokeback Brandenburg? Not exactly. Instead, Harvest is a rich, quietly understated film that follows two young apprentices who are completing their training on a farm outside of Berlin, their relationship slowly evolving and taking root.

Brooding Marko isn't sure what he really wants out of life; whether or not he wants to be a farmer, despite being mere weeks away from his final exams. He keeps to himself at work, often finding himself the brunt of teasing from the farmhands, who mock him for buying organic food and for avoiding alcohol.

When new apprentice Jacob arrives the pair form a friendship, but Jacob's laidback, outgoing demeanor appears at odds with Marko's introspective personality. During the long, solitary days spent together in the fields, however, the twosome form a natural bond that hints of deeper feelings.

A big-city road trip, away from the prying eyes of their fellow farmers, allows a tender relationship to evolve. But neither young man has ever thought about how—and especially about how openly—he wants to live his life.

Director Benjamin Cantu has a background in documentary filmmaking, and in this first feature-length drama he creates an intriguing hybrid, the film's fictional love story developing against the setting of a real working farm that is populated by a supporting cast of actual apprentices.

Mother Earth (Tierra Madre)

Dylan Verrechia
Mexico 2010 video 62 min

From director Dylan Verrechia, Mother Earth is a creative take on biopic, featuring documentary style reenactments of the true events of the life of Aidee—who plays herself on screen—a single mother of two who, to make ends meet, dances at exotic clubs and hosts men. Her life is not an easy one. Filled with passionate ups and downs, highs and lows, and loves and losses, Aidee is struggling in a soulless job when she meets beautiful young Rosalba. After some persuading, Aidee agrees to allow Rosalba to kiss her and they quickly fall in love, become partners, and equally shoulder domestic responsibilities of childcare and bill-paying while fostering what Aidee believes will be an enduring love.

Shot in romantic black and white, Mother Earth blurs the line between feature and documentary with its poetic narration and stark, grainy photography. Aidee works hard, makes sacrifices, does the best she can with her children, searches for love, enjoys love, and loses love. Straddling the line between fiction and documentary, Mother Earth is an interesting, honest exploration of one woman's life in Mexico.

Going Down in LA-LA Land

Casper Andreas

USA 2011 video 105 min

Since movie cameras first started rolling in Hollywood, there has been a never-ending line of sexy, aspiring actors streaming into Los Angeles who hope to make it big. But La-La Land chews up and spits out more hot, hunky boys than it embraces, leading many to turn to the dark side of temping, waitering...and porn.

Adam is a recent transplant from New York City who has arrived in Los Angeles to make it big as an actor. Unfortunately, he shares his dream with thousands of other out-of-work actors, and when he lands a job as a production assistant at a porn company he is initially adamant that he is going to stay behind the scenes. It isn't long, however, before the lure of extra cash sees Adam stepping in front of the camera and eventually turning to escorting.

When one of his clients turns out to be the closeted star of a popular television sitcom, Adam's life becomes a queer version of Pretty Woman. The couple's relationship quickly evolves into something more than just client and trick, and when Adam's porn past makes the front page of the tabloids, his one true chance of happiness in Hollywood is threatened.

Based on the novel of the same name, Going Down in LA-LA Land is a sexy, uncensored look at our celebrity-obsessed culture and what an actor can, and will, do to survive in Hollywood.

Daphne

Clare Beavan

UK 2007 video 90 min

The BBC film Daphne is a stylish and sensual exploration of the secret love life of one of the world's most famous writers, Daphne du Maurier. Based on personal letters and biographies, the film charts the story of Daphne's unrequited passion for the beautiful and glamorous American publishing heiress, Ellen Doubleday.

The story begins in 1952 and flashes back a decade earlier to the return of Daphne's husband from the war. She is mired in boredom, trapped in a comfortable married life and yearning for something more. That something comes along in the form of American publisher Nelson Doubleday's beautiful wife, Ellen (Elizabeth McGovern), the two women thrown together when Daphne travels to America to answer allegations of plagiarism.

The film reveals how Daphne's obsession with forbidden love leads to her writing the play, September Tide. During this time, she meets irreverent and fun-loving actress, Gertrude Lawrence, an encounter that leads to a life-changing but ultimately doomed love affair.

Daphne called herself 'a boy in a box' and this compelling biopic illustrates how her incendiary love life informs the writing of her famous stories. Evoking the spirit of classic cinema, this elegant and engaging drama provides an intimate glimpse into the life, loves and creative genius of a writer who risked everything in the pursuit of love.

The Sleeping Beauty of East Finchley

Seamus Rea

UK 2010 video 50 min

Trapped in a life bookended by caring for her mother and crunching numbers at work, devout Joan's days are brightened only by regular visits from her mother's attentive homecare nurse, Pat. Catching up in the kitchen, the pair bond over a shared love of 1960's soul music and vinyl records. Pat, overhearing Joan's idle singing, convinces her to share her musical gift and join a women's choir called "Friends of Dusty."

When Joan realizes exactly what kind of women's choir this is, her Catholic beliefs cause her to beat a hasty retreat to the frumpy and fussy comforts of the local church choir. The choirmaster, however, is completely unappreciative of her vocal range and talents, and Joan decides to set aside her Sapphic misgivings and give the "Friends of Dusty" another go.

Refined performances and uplifting choral numbers simply dazzle in this feel-good, all-dyke version of Glee. A low-key and lovely Little Voice for the lesbian set, director Seamus Rea exercises an extraordinarily deft touch in this credible tea-and-crumpets drama of love.

L'Amour Fou (L'amour fou)

Pierre Thoretton

France 2010 35mm 100 min

Yves Saint Laurent is heralded as one of 20th century's greatest fashion designers. Together with ex-lover and longtime business partner, Pierre Bergé, the Yves Saint Laurent Couture House broke boundaries that shook the world of fashion, forever changing the way women dressed.

In 1958, Pierre Bergé met Yves Saint Laurent and they became inseparable partners. The young Saint Laurent, just 21 years old, took over from Dior after Dior's sudden death, and met businessman Bergé.

Considered by many as fashion's most legendary duo, Pierre and Yves amassed a collection of art that rivaled international museums, and despite running one of the world's most successful fashion houses, they found time to engage in the fight against AIDS, raising millions of dollars in the process. Upon Yves Saint Laurent's death, Bergé decided to sell their private art collection in what was considered the auction of the century. Each object and art piece tells a story about their personal lives, and this documentary, filled with rare material archives and exclusive images of their homes, tells their story—a story of love, art and ethics.

With echoes of Lagerfeld Confidential, Valentino: The Last Emperor and The September Issue, L'Amour Fou is a grand tribute to an empire of decadence and beauty. This gorgeously lush biopic of one of the greatest names in fashion will linger because, as Saint Laurent once said, "Fashions fade, but style is eternal."

BLACK BOXES

This cinematically charged program doesn't try to raise questions about what is black queer identity, instead scintillatingly repudiating conventional notions of how race, sexual orientation and gender collide with black body politics. The tense passion in multi-award-winning golden girl Dee Ree's Colonial Gods combines with the joyful bliss of "and I am me," and when added to the brooding self-denial of Billy "Sweet Pea" Strayhorn's characterization in Billy & Aaron, one thing is for sure: you will never put a box around blackness again.

Romeos is an engrossing, uplifting film about love, friendship and sexual awakening. Luka wants nothing more than to be a confident, self-assured guy—with the body he has long desired. And he has some help to do this. Testosterone, an understanding best friend, Ine, and the encouragement of a community accessible only on Internet bolster him.

Life in the big city of Cologne, however, throws many obstacles his way. Bureaucratic red tape forces him into quarters at the female nurses' residence. What would typically be a dream for most guys causes stress for Luka. Beneath his layers of clothing, he is covering up something to which he feels no connection. Transgender, he has been put in the wrong box and wants to break free.

Jesús Garay

Spain 2010 video 92 min

Àsia, a shy and beautiful young college student, is lying in the hospital in a coma. Her mother, and boyfriend Nathaniel, keep constant vigil, hoping and praying that Àsia will regain consciousness. Àsia seems unhappy and unsure of her place in the world. She is the antithesis of art student Eloise, who is out, proud and unapologetic. Àsia's friends mock Eloise, but Àsia is inexplicably drawn to her and answers an ad that Eloise has posted in search of a model for an art project.

Hesitant but excited, Àsia discovers new feelings that ease her unhappiness and confusion. As Àsia and Eloise spend more time together, a relationship slowly and carefully begins to develop and, despite the many obstacles facing them, the two young women fall in love. Feeling truly happy for the first time in her life, Àsia must choose between the expectations of her family and following her heart. ## The LuLu Sessions

S. Casper Wong

USA 2011 video 88 min

Lulu is Louise Nutter, a leading researcher in the field of breast cancer drug therapies. She is sharp-witted, husky-voiced and the complicated friend and lover of filmmaker, S. Casper Wong. The LuLu Sessions opens on Lulu receiving the phone call that will change her life inalterably. She has aggressive breast cancer, and the doctor schedules a mastectomy immediately.

Over the next 15 months, Lulu and Casper embark on a radical journey together—through chemotherapy and hair loss and pain, but also through a joint decision to embrace together the time that remains. They face Lulu's impending death with eyes wide open and all senses exposed. They travel to all the places they love and to places they have not yet seen; they argue and they disagree. But they have a glorious time together, filming all the way. Something intensely magical is captured on screen as Lulu and Casper work to find peace in a relationship where no peace existed when they were both well.

The LuLu Sessions is a magnificent, emotional film that refuses to shy away from the sad, unsightly realities of death and, specifically, death by cancer. But there is far more to this moving documentary than sadness and death. Tenderly revealed is the inexplicable beauty, calmness, clarity and truth that can emerge from the depths of something so painful. In all things dark, so there is light, and The LuLu Sessions masters a strong depiction of both.

After three years in prison, macho Enrique (Esai Morales) returns home to the Bronx to find that everything in his world has changed. His wife, Angela (Judy Reyes), is emotionally distant, and his teenage son, Michael, is not the same boy Enrique left behind when he went to jail.

Michael (newcomer Harmony Santana in a break-out performance) is beginning to explore his gender identity, sneaking out at night as Vanessa and attracting the attention of an older player. When Enrique discovers women's clothing and pictures of Michael as Vanessa, he is incensed, and his all too revealing reaction is to scream, "What does this say about me?"

Caught in the middle of the ensuing battle between father and child is Angela. She is desperately clinging to the love she once felt for her husband, while trying to protect Michael from Enrique's traditional beliefs of what a man should be.

Still under the watchful eye of his parole officer, Enrique must become the father he needs to be or, once again, risk losing his family and freedom. Gun Hill Road is a complex and sensitive debut from director Green that challenges notions of masculinity, identity and family, revealing that it is not who we are on the outside that defines us, but who we are on the inside.

80 Days (80 egunean)

Jon Garaño and Jose Mari Goenaga

Spain 2010 35mm 105 min

Abandoned by her daughter and ignored by her husband, Axun begins visiting her comatose ex-son-in-law in the hospital. Driven by a refined sense of duty, Axun soon encounters the merry, mischievous music teacher Maite, whose brother is also in a coma and shares the same hospital room. Between cross-stitching and caring for the comatose, golden girls Axun and Maite rediscover that they were childhood chums, and delightfully revive their once-forgotten friendship—fifty years later.

As memories of a fateful and furtive kiss resurface, Axun soon finds herself teetering on the tightrope between late-blooming passion and old-fashioned propriety, a passion that out-and-proud Maite negotiated decades earlier. Over an 80-day period, long-suppressed feelings begin to emerge, as Axun is forced to reassess her traditional life choices and find the courage to follow her heart.

Thematically evocative of Almodovar's Talk to Her, 80 Days is a carefully constructed script that addresses multiple issues. The film's nimble and nuanced performances encourage us to root for the protagonists and to empathize with the predicaments of the less sympathetic characters. An utterly engrossing portrait of a second chance at first love, Garaño's cinematic gem reminds us why these are called the golden years. You will marvel at this assured direction of same-sex senior citizens who are on the precipice of a romantic renaissance.

Weekend

Andrew Haigh
UK 2011 video 96 min

A wistful Friday-to-Sunday romance unfolds in Weekend, a poignant and emotionally honest drama that chronicles the start of a potential relationship in all its insecure, messy, drunken glory.

After spending the evening with his straight friends, Russell (Tom Cullen) heads out to a gay club, alone and on the pull. At last call, drunk and horny, he picks up Glen (Chris New) and brings him home. They have what is typically referred to as a regret-soaked one-night stand where short-term memory is clouded by the effects of too much alcohol.

The next morning, Glen, an artist, pulls out a tape recorder and interviews the timid Russell about Russell's recollection of their hook-up, trying to coax out details of the young man's motivations and desires. The scene is masterful, illustrating the early stages of romance—the part when you reveal all that you feel defines you as a person and when you put across who you really hope to become.

When Glen leaves Russell's apartment, they awkwardly exchange phone numbers, and the viewer questions whether the two men will see each other again. But neither man can stop thinking about the other, and within hours Glen shows up at Russell's work.

Throughout the remainder of the weekend, in bars and in bedrooms, getting drunk and taking drugs, telling stories and having sex, the two men embark on a complicated and emotional romance that evolves, over three days, from a one-night stand to something deeper. The lows and highs of relationships are crammed into this brief window, rendering a film that is strikingly relatable.

With Weekend, Andrew Haigh announces himself as a director to watch. Both Cullen and New deliver warm, natural performances, creating an instant bond with their characters. The film is a refreshingly simple yet compelling love story of two ordinary guys and one weekend that you will hope won't ever end.

The Sons of Tennessee Williams

Tim Wolff

USA 2010 video 75 min

The Sons of Tennessee Williams documents the story of the men in late 1950s New Orleans who brought the first drag balls to Mardi Gras and who paved the way for people's freedom to perform in the fabulous pomp and pageantry that is enjoyed today.

At a time when police raids on gay bars, violent hate crimes and public shaming of known homosexuals were commonplace behaviours, a handful of gay men pushed back against those systems of oppression by forming underground drag crews and hosting lavish secret balls. Originally conceived as a political send-up of their mainstream straight society counterparts, these drag crews persevered and eventually became a hallmark of modern Mardi Gras.

The Sons of Tennessee Williams interweaves powerful archival footage of New Orleans, Mardi Gras, and the journey of drag balls with contemporary interviews with key players and historians. This tremendously rewarding film is entertaining, captivating and joyful in its celebration of one of the most valuable stories in gay history.

Along the way, Moshen meets Yolande (played by legendary actress, Marina Vlady, from Orson Welles and Jean-Luc Godard films), who feels sympathy for the drifter and offers him a place to stay and a few odd jobs. Moshen's past as French teacher in Tehran serves him well, but despite the relative tolerance for homosexuals in France, he feels the need to hide Hassan from Yolande.

Subtlety in direction and lack of manufactured sentimentality make this film a slow-burning, emotional journey. Algerian filmmaker Amor Hakkar also stars in this intricate character study of two men whose fate, in both Iran and France, is left in the hands of officials.

The Guide (o xenagos)

Zacharias Mavroeidis
Greece 2010 video 94 min

You've probably seen more than a few films where characters are shaken out of their sad, dull lives by travels to exotic lands. But in Zacharias' quirky and endearing debut feature, it's the local Greek tour guide who learns a few things from his group of sightseers.

Uptight Iasonas (winningly played by newcomer Mihalīs Oikonomou) wants to show off Athens' architectural heritage. His wards, however, are more interested in frappés, beach time and people's sexual habits. When flamboyant Frenchman Olivier crashes the tour, Iasonas is not sure where to look or what to say—or whether to flee back into the arms of his ex-girlfriend.

Although Iasonas takes his dilemma far too seriously, the movie does not. Among its joys are the sharply drawn minor characters and the subtle deadpan humour that exists among the group's bickering nationalities. When everyone gangs up on the American, Mr. Laidback Dude bares his claws, exclaiming, "I think that Europe is like a bunch of old ladies fighting over a golden spoon."

Contemporary Athens has never been considered an architectural gem, but Mavroeidis' seductive portrait will tempt you to hop on the next flight to the Mediterranean.

The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister

James Kent
UK 2010 Video 90 min

The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister, winner of last year's RBC Royal Bank Audience Award for Best Feature, is sure to incite some fervent bodice ripping with the bold and passionate true story of Anne Lister (1791-1840), a Yorkshire landowner and industrialist who detailed her life and Sapphic loves in a four million-word diary.

The BBC-produced The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister brings the title character's detailed journals to life, deciphering the coded language in which Anne wrote, and provides an intimate glimpse into the life of a woman who has been called Britain's first modern lesbian.

Anne, played by Maxine Peake, pours her heart out onto the pages of her painfully honest journal, vividly capturing the passion she felt for the women in her life. Although careful to keep her feelings secret in her journal, the pressures of English upper-class society don't stop her from defying convention and pursuing the woman of her dreams, the beautiful Mariana (Anna Madeley from Affinity).

Unable to be with the woman she loves, Anne relies on the friendship of Tib (Susan Lynch from Elizabeth: The Golden Age), her one-time lover. Anne, hearing that Mariana is visiting, cannot resist seeing her paramour, thereby risking her home, social standing and even her life.

Beautifully shot and showcasing a superb supporting cast, The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister captures the sweeping romance and unbridled passion of classic British novels, while uncovering a hidden chapter of our lesbian history.

Renée

Eric Drath

USA 2011 video 76 min

When did playing tennis become an earth-shattering social and political event? The moment Renée Richards picked up a racquet.

In 1976, trans athlete Renée Richards wanted to play in the U.S. Open tennis tournament. The United States Tennis Association (USTA), however, demanded she take a chromosome test to determine her female status. Richards refused, went to court, won the right to play as a woman without any testing, and changed history. And through it all, this pioneering woman faced her detractors with unparalleled grace and dignity.

In this revealing ESPN Films documentary, director Eric Drath charts the remarkable life of the now 76-year-old Richards. We see her as a young Richard Raskin, an athletic teen who goes on to become a successful doctor, husband and father. We view her physical transition to Renée, chart her struggles as a groundbreaking female tennis player who defied ignorance but not time—she turned pro at the advanced age of 43, which dramatically shortened her career—and, finally, we witness the pained relationship she has today with her troubled son, Nicholas.

Putting Renée's on-court achievements into perspective are tennis luminaries Billie Jean King, Martina Navratilova, Mary Carillo, Virginia Wade and John McEnroe in a documentary whose illuminating insight into the world of professional tennis creates a compelling portrait of one of America's great athletes.

Another Movie of Love (Otra película de amor)

Edwin Oyarce

Chile 2010 video 108 min

So much sexual tension you could spread it on an empanada! Two childhood friends, now young adults, reconnect by accident one day and, over the course of a hot and steamy summer, develop a closeness that goes beyond mere friendship.

Diego is a shutterbug who can't stop taking pictures. Sebastian is staying with his father and step-mom for the summer and is just happy to have someone to smoke dope with while he's in Santiago. Diego's looking for an escape from the drama in his life—his mom is a bit of a drinker and his young neighbour is in a coma after a car accident. But from the moment when Sebastian warily asks Diego, "Do you like Madonna?" one question overrides all other concerns: "Will they or won't they?"

A stray foot brushes against a leg while the boys are on the couch together talking about sex. A photo shoot where they're both dressed in tighty-whiteys and bandages gets a little too drunken. A holiday at a secluded house lures them into the cold ocean water. All the while, a lascivious late-night TV host (or hallucination?) insists that life's pleasures must be enjoyed.

Director Edwin Oyarce's sweet tale unwinds at a leisurely pace, his camera lingering on stunning ocean vistas, flocks of birds and tanned flesh. Both handsome leads possess unaffected charm and indisputable screen chemistry. Just don't expect simple resolutions.

So Hard to Forget (Como esquecer)

Malu De Martino

Brazil 2010 video 98 min

A poignant and ultimately uplifting examination of love, loss and redemption, So Hard to Forget charts the course of emotions experienced by one woman consumed by love during her relationship, and overcome by grief when this love goes awry.

Julia is a 35-year-old English literature teacher who is grappling with a long and painful depression following her ten-year affair with girlfriend Antonia. Julia spends her days immersed in her classes, and evenings sifting through photos, letters and other mementoes of her lost love. Her life is in danger of emotional suffocation, the walls she has built around her threatening to drive her friends away.

As Julia struggles to reclaim her life, she agrees to rent a seaside house outside of Rio with her gay best friend Hugo—only recently recovered from the death of his partner—and Lisa, a lawyer whose boyfriend has dumped her after learning she is pregnant.

Together, the trio form an unlikely family, creating an emotional support system for one another that they can't seem to fulfill for themselves. The arrival of Lisa's free-spirited cousin, Helena, forces Julia to confront past trauma and admit that it may be time to let go and to possibly love again.

So Hard to Forget resonates with its honest portrayal of ordinary people trying desperately to overcome heartache, heal their emotional wounds and allow themselves to embrace the hope that they can be happy.

Buffering

Christian Martin and Darren Flaxstone
UK 2011 video 81 min

A fun and frothy sex comedy is not what you'd expect from the filmmakers behind the gritty British drama, Shank (Inside Out, 2009), but Buffering lets it all hang out in this tale of a young gay couple who, when times get hard, use their sexual skills to pay the bills.

Seb and Aaron are head-over-heels in love and about to celebrate their anniversary. But the couple are feeling the pinch of the recession and they need to make a fast buck. Out of work, broke and with their house about to be repossessed, the ever-inventive Aaron decides to install a hidden camera in the bedroom and post footage on a pay-per-view website of himself and Seb having sex. Much to Aaron's surprise, their online escapades prove popular and the money starts rolling in. The only problem is, Seb isn't in on the plan.

When Seb finds the camera, he isn't exactly thrilled and initially threatens to pull the plug. Aaron, however, with the help of their recently returned roommate Jem, convinces Seb of the benefits of being paid to get laid.

Deftly balancing over-the-top camp humour with an honest portrayal of the stress and challenges many relationships endure, Buffering is a perfect date-night movie for anyone who likes to watch.

Leading Ladies

Daniel Beahm and Erika Randall Beahm

USA 2010 video 102 min

So you think your family are nuts? The Campari sisters exist solely to fulfill the dreams of mama Sheri Campari (Melanie LaPatin), a stage mother whose unruly mane of flaming red hair tells you all you need to know about her temper. Tasi (Shannon Lea Smith), a chip off the old drama-queen block, is an amateur ballroom dancer. Grounded and self-sacrificing Toni (Laurel Vail) is responsible for keeping her sister on track, filling in as the lead when Tasi needs to practice.

When dance partner Cedric (Benji Schwimmer) takes Toni to a nightclub where gender lines are less clearly defined than in ballroom competition, Toni starts thinking about what she wants for herself. This exuberant, big-hearted comedy could be dubbed Queerly Ballroom, its plot twists matched only by the footwork.

Schwimmer took first prize on season three of So You Think You Can Dance, and Melanie LaPatin has choreographed for So You think You Can Dance and its Canadian sibling. The dance numbers, especially the finale, are breathlessly fun.

OFF BEAT

Jan Gassmann

Switzerland 2011 video 95 min

Twenty-six year-old Lukas is a gifted rapper who is on the verge of throwing away any chance at success because of his excessive abuse of booze and drugs. Dominated by secrets, he has lived for the past decade with his producer, Mischa, in an old loft where they farm cannabis. But Lukas' relationship with Mischa, who is twenty years his senior, goes beyond the professional. The pair have carried on a turbulent affair for years.

After a disastrous rap performance from Lukas, Mischa becomes fed up and suggests they start working with Lukas' 16-year-old brother, Sämi, also an aspiring rapper. The proposal sends Lukas into a further downward spiral and after an all-night coke-bender he wakes up in the hospital, where Mischa announces his intention of leaving.

As Mischa begins grooming Sämi as the next rap prodigy, Lukas oscillates between jealousy and concern, worrying that his ex-lover's intentions for Sämi could lead his brother down the same destructive path.

Portraying Lukas, real-life musician Hans-Jakob Mühlenthaler is a revelation. He fills the screen with personality, commanding the stage during live performances. Even more impressive, are the film's later scenes where Lukas is trying to re-launch his career with an acoustic-rap hybrid that showcases his gift for melody and lyrics.

OFF BEAT is an impressive narrative debut from director Gassmann, who cut his teeth on documentary filmmaking and creates an engrossing character study of a man who has lost the sense of who he is and what he wants out of life.

You Will Be Mine (Je te mangerais)

Sophie Laloy

France 2008 video 96 min

Long, white, feminine fingers stroking piano keys—it's enough to drive an already tightly-strung lesbian mad with desire.

In this wonderfully ripe, psychosexual French drama, classical pianist Marie (Judith Davis) is accepted into the Lyon Conservatory of Music. Her family arrange for Marie to move in with childhood friend Emma (Isild Le Besco), a medical student who's been living alone in a large apartment since the death of her father and the departure of her artist mother.

Emma can't keep her eyes and—ultimately—her hands off Marie, who initially submits to her roommate's desires but then feels suffocated by Emma's controlling and jealous nature. But does Marie truly want to be rid of the oppressive Emma despite the fact that Marie started dating classmate Sami (Johan Libéreau)?

Director Laloy based the film on her own experiences of living with a roommate while studying classical music in Lyon. Putting her knowledge of music to good use, she deftly includes classical pieces by Schumann, Ravel, Chopin and Bach to ratchet up the film's tension. And the camera simply loves the beautiful, pouting young stars, who prowl about the gloomy apartment (often in their lingerie) like caged cats. Enjoy this delicious, slightly deranged drama.

Four More Years (Fyra år till)

Tova Magnusson
Sweden 2010 video 90 min

Politics is an arena full of comedic potential, yet rarely are politicians the central characters in a gay comedy. The Swedish film Four More Years changes all that, with a smart and sweet love story sure to win over audiences at the ballot box.

Handsome and funny David Holst is the popular leader of the Liberal People's Party, poised to become Sweden's next Prime Minister. But in politics, as in life, things rarely go as planned. Flash forward two years and, after experiencing a stunning election defeat to the Social Democrats, David is in a political and personal free fall—voters have deserted him, the party is in uproar and he can barely muster the energy to get out of bed.

His life becomes further complicated when he meets the suave and sexy Martin. Sparks instantly fly. As David grapples with his new-found feelings, the problem is not that he's already married to Fia, who is his closest political aide, or that he's fallen in love with another man. The problem is that the man he's fallen head over heels with is the party secretary of the new ruling government.

The deeper David falls, the more his anxiety intensifies. Should he give up his career, throw away his marriage, abandon his colleagues—all for a social democrat who enjoys more popularity between the sheets than David does in the polls?

Who Took the Bomp? Le Tigre on Tour

Kerthy Fix
USA 2010 video 72 min

Le Tigre are awesome. Whether performing electro-pop music that contains socio-political lyrics for modern feminism, or speaking intelligently about the history of barriers against women in music, Kathleen Hanna, Johanna Fateman and JD Samson of Le Tigre are all just damned cool.

Who Took the Bomp? Le Tigre on Tour reveals their coolness, their politics, the heart behind their music, and the journey that brought them to their current stage incarnation. Following the band on their 2004 This Island world tour, Kerthy Fix's documentary effectively blends raw, energetic stage footage, candid conversation, and personal ruminations on performances of sex, gender, feminism and female masculinity.

Hanna brings a particular depth of wisdom to the film as she recounts her early years in the music industry and the eventual conception of the riot grrrl movement in the nineties, at the center of which was Hanna's former band Bikini Kill. Like many social movements that originate with the marginalized, the concept of riot grrrl was quickly co-opted by the mainstream, and Hanna and other key players were lambasted for selling out.

Le Tigre on Tour shows the band for all that they are: intelligent, political, badass sexpots who have the rare ability to make you feel smarter as you watch them high-kick in fluorescent spandex jumpsuits. This film is a whopping good time.

Dykes Planning Tykes: Queering the Family Tree

Nancy Nicol and Mary Daniel
Canada 2011 video 64 min

Thirty years ago lesbian mothers were losing their children in court. Those wanting to become parents were denied access to reproductive technologies and had no legal rights.

Faced with difficult barriers, lesbians and queer-identified women took matters into their own hands, finding ways to bring children into their lives and in the process reinventing notions of the family.

The film takes us into the Dykes Planning Tykes course. Founded in 1997 in Toronto, this modest course has changed the lives of many as it continues to queer the family tree, inspiring gay and trans parents to seek their rightful place in the world of parenting. The group, in fact, can be seen as revolutionary.

Incorporating home videos, historical footage and new interviews featuring key players of the day, Dykes Planning Tykes brings these courageous pioneers to the big screen.

Lip Service (Episodes 1 to 3)

John McKay and Harry Bradbeer
UK 2010 video 180 min

Lip Service is a steamy, sexy big city lesbian drama surrounding the loves, lives and heartbreaks of a small group of soon to be 30-something best friends in Glasgow. The funny, irreverent series follows the interwoven love lives of Frankie, Cat and Tess, whose search for happiness stirs up hidden passions and secrets. The main characters are feverishly hot, fit, fearful and, best of all, beautifully and redeemably flawed.

Frankie, the deeply troubled blond with the metal-searing eyes, prefers demolishing everything around her rather than knock down the emotional walls she has built. She returns to Glasgow from New York to exorcise a few childhood demons and reclaim, at all costs, Cat, the love she left behind.

Cat, the petite and glamorous professional, is trying to move on from the wrecking ball that was Frankie. Left emotionally beaten and bleeding, Cat turns to Sam, the strong and silent detective sergeant who she hopes will solve her cold crime of passion.

Cat's roommate and best friend, aspiring actress Tess, has an uncanny knack for attracting all the wrong sorts of women.

Along for the ride is an ensemble cast of unrequited loves, commitment phobes, kleptomaniacs, and Cat's well-intentioned but somewhat insane mother.

Join us tomorrow for a second bite of the cherry...which is much more tasty than a heaping helping of haggis!

is punishable by six months to five years in prison. But is Cameroonian society truly homophobic? What does individual freedom mean in this country?

In Cameroon: Coming out of the Nkuta, the life stories of several young homosexuals and Alice N'kom, a formidable human rights lawyer, portray a country that is based in strong traditions while hanging onto remnants of colonial influence. More than a value judgement, this film aims to arrive at a better understanding of the post-colonial hypocrisy that has been created within the Cameroonian society.

Florent: Queen of the Meat Market

David Sigal

USA 2010 video 89 min

Fashion, fun, pop culture, subculture, food, activism and the joy of the human spirit come together in David Sigal's fabulous documentary about the famous all-night Florent diner located in the meat-packing district of New York City. Established in 1985, when the meat-packing district was home to a handful of leather and fetish bars; transvestite and transsexual sex workers, and the meat-packing warehouses themselves, Florent the restaurant was the brainchild of activist, artist and conservationist Florent Morellet, who envisioned a simple place where people could meet in a movement of inclusivity.

What started as a simple idea exploded into an all-out juggernaut, a happening, a symbol of freedom and honesty and unity. At any given time, one might find a drag king perched at the counter, eating a grilled cheese sandwich while sitting next to an elderly couple who are having coffee and cake, along with any of the hundreds of actors and rock stars who frequented the place—Bowie and Iman, Madonna, Johnny Depp, Julianne Moore, Isaac Misrahi, Diane von Furstenberg, the Olsen twins—sharing a booth with a troupe of can-can dancers.

Sigal's Florent takes us from the restaurant's inception in the roaring eighties to its ultimate closure in 2008. The film explores what the restaurant had come to mean to the Pride and HIV/AIDS movements, and, eventually, to the conservation movement, as Morellet fights to preserve the historical authenticity of the meat-packing district, which had become suffocated by expensive storefronts and designer restaurants. When Florent's lease comes up for renewal, Morellet must make the difficult decision to either close the restaurant or pay $40,000 per month in rent. What began as a simple idea transformed over twenty-three years into a phenomenon, a force that strove to bring joy, political awareness, activism, and socially conscious advertising to the hearts and minds of the world around it.

Art and Soul

South African photographer Zanele Muholi, filmmaking legend Barbara Hammer, and local art star Deanna Bowen come together in this program that explores the intersection between art, personal history, community and social activism.

Generations

Barbara Hammer
USA 2010 video 30 min

Generations is a film about mentoring and passing on the tradition of personal experimental filmmaking. Seventy-year-old acclaimed director Barbara Hammer hands her camera to Gina Carducci, an aspiring queer filmmaker. The women, each shooting her own footage during the last days of Astroland at Coney Island, find that the inevitable fact of ageing echoes in the architecture of the amusement park. Separately editing their respective footage, the filmmakers ultimately blend their work, thereby creating a true generational, experimental document.

sum of the parts: what can be named

Deanna Bowen
Canada 2010 video 19 min
sum of the parts: what can be named is a twenty-minute oral history that recounts the forgotten journey of the Bowen family from its earliest documented history in Clinton, Georgia in 1815, as told by Bowen herself. Influenced by Eli Wiesel's 1989 New York Times article regarding art, the Holocaust, and the trivialization of memory, the work chronicles the lives of family members as it delves into the unknown, retracing what is hidden and reclaiming histories of the lost.

Difficult Love

Zanele Muholi and
Peter Goldsmid
South Africa 2010 video 47 min

Difficult Love is an intimate, thought-provoking portrait of internationally celebrated South African lesbian photographer, Zanele Muholi, and her highly personal take on the challenges facing black lesbians in South Africa today. The film features interviews with Muholi as well as with her friends, colleagues and peers, and provides a compelling overview of the artist, her life and her work. This poignant documentary takes us behind the façade of art-making and shares with us the highly political environment Muholi must navigate in order to bring her lush photographs to light.

Offside

Jafar Panahi

Iran 2006 35mm 93 min

Iranian filmmaker Jafar Panahi (The White Balloon and The Circle) was recently sentenced to six years imprisonment and banned from filmmaking for the next 20 years. The Festival wishes to draw attention to his plight by screening his clever parable on gender equality, Offside, which was banned in Iran upon its release. In a queer context, the film finds particular relevance in lesbian and trans communities.

In this darkly comic gender-bender, girls try to subvert the system by dressing up as young men in order to enter a stadium soccer match in Tehran. Some succeed, but many are arrested. Neither prisoners nor guards, however, can contain their excitement for the match, and the guards eventually feed updates and share repartee with the prisoners.

Filmed in part during the event it dramatizes, Offside generates the adrenaline of an on-the-ground documentary, but the naturalistic performances and relentless humor contribute toward making this film a classic of contemporary cinema.

Black Field (Mavro Livadi)

Vardis Marinakis

Greece 2010 video 104 min

In 1654, outside a remote cloister in Greece, a lone rider falls from his dying horse. The injured soldier (Hristos Passalis) is chained to a wall and slowly nursed back to health by two nuns—the older, worldly Areti, and the younger, painfully shy Anthi (Sofia Georgovassili).

Anthi, who seldom interacts with the other nuns, takes a shine to the soldier, whom she discovers is a deserter. She also overhears that the mother superior is going to return him to his unit to collect a reward.

Possessed by an unspoken need, Anthi frees the soldier and they escape the claustrophobic cloister together, sharing a journey that reveals Anthi not as a girl, but as a teenage boy, whose gender has remained a secret to all except the mother superior, who brought Anthi to the nunnery as a child.

First-time director Marinakis and cinematographer Marcus Waterloo craft a strange fairy tale that shifts between long, lyrical passages to moments of brutality and raw sexuality that deal with Anthi coming to terms with his masculinity while under the tutelage of the soldier. Sofia Georgovassili's mostly silent performance earned her critical kudos, including Best Actress Award at the 2010 Seville European Film Festival.

The Evening Dress (La Robe du soir)

Myriam Aziza

France 2009 35mm 84 min

Director Myriam Aziza vividly brings to life suburban Paris in this engrossing coming-of-age story. Juliette, a 12-year-old tomboy, forms an intense crush on her teacher, whose demeanour is so provocative that all the boys in class have crushes on her, too.

When teacher Mrs. Solenska starts paying close attention to a failing classmate, Juliette develops an all-consuming jealousy, leading the young girl on a mission to find out more about her teacher's personal life. Juliette's undying curiosity will have its consequences, leaving both student and teacher with difficult choices.

Burgeoning lesbian sexuality has been a recent fascination in French cinema, commanded by a wave of new female directors that include this year's Céline Sciamma (Tomboy) and Sophie Laloy (You Will Be Mine).

Filmed in gorgeous CinemaScope, The Evening Dress showcases brave performances from the two leads and seemingly effortless direction, making this debut feature a critical success.

Absent (Ausente)

Marco Berger

Argentina 2011 video 90 min

Marco Berger, winner of last year's inaugural Bill Sherwood Award at Inside Out for Plan B, takes a stab at a psychological thriller with his second directorial effort, Absent.

Martin, a brooding teenager played by Javier de Pietro in a break-out performance, is infatuated with his swimming coach. The young boy weasels his way into his coach's car and eventually into his apartment, under the pretense that he is staying at a friend's house.

From here, we start sensing that something is dreadfully wrong, the tension accentuated by a moody soundtrack and voyeuristic camera work. The often-explored narrative of the older predator is provocatively turned on its head, making the suspense all the more compelling for the viewer.

Featuring authentic performances and demonstrating mature directorial control, Absent is a courageous departure for the filmmaker, who is quickly becoming a force to be reckoned with in his native Argentina.

Codependent Lesbian Space Alien Seeks Same

Madeleine Olnek

USA 2011 video 76 min

Fresh from Sundance, Madeleine Olnek's debut feature is sure to have lesbian earthlings laughing all the way to the moon.

Codependent Lesbian Space Alien Seeks Same follows the adventures of three lesbian space aliens on the planet Earth, and the story of the romance between Jane, a shy greeting card store employee, and Zoinx, the woman Jane does not realize is from outer-space. Despite the wacky premise, many lesbians will recognize themselves in Jane, a very lonely gal who will do anything for love.

Meanwhile, two government agents, or 'Men In Black', are closely tracking Jane and the aliens, while harboring their own juicy secrets. One agent is so incompetent that even more hilarity ensues.

Already being hailed as a cult classic, this film is an homage to Ed Wood and the campy late night movies of the 50's. Great performances and a comedic script that would make writers of Saturday Night Live salivate make this an exceptional work that defies easy comparisons with the plonk from yesteryear.

We Were Here

David Weissman

USA 2010 video 90 min

Thirty years after the first news report of what was initially referred to as the 'gay cancer,' director David Weissman has crafted the definitive documentary on the early years of the AIDS crisis. We Were Here focuses on the stories of five individuals who were at the centre of the epidemic in San Francisco during the early 1980s.

The five subjects, who include HIV-positive artist Daniel Goldstein, nurse Eileen Glutzer, flower stall owner Guy Clark, and community activists Ed Wolf and Paul Boneberg, recall those early days when paranoia and confusion set the tone. They describe San Francisco during the heady days of the 1970s, when Harvey Milk energized the gay community, and they recall the first warnings of the disease that would change all of their lives. Telling photographs and news footage from the era supplement their reminiscences, but the heart of the film is in the personal testaments of these individuals.

We Were Here tracks the crisis all the way to the present, covering the drug advances that have made living with the disease possible, as well as the public relations victories that helped remove the stigma.

Though a San Francisco-based story, We Were Here extends beyond San Francisco and beyond AIDS itself. The documentary is a rare AIDS film that is ultimately uplifting and inspirational, illustrating how the LGBT community came together with love, compassion and determination, to support one another in a time of crisis.

Lip Service (Episodes 4 to 6)

Harry Bradbeer

UK 2010 video 180 min

More sex, lies and true love in modern Scotland, as Inside Out presents the final three episodes of the first season of the popular BBC television drama, Lip Service.

Dubbed the British L Word, Lip Service heats up the screen with three more episodes that bring the action to a full boil. The seductive relationship drama ramps up the sex lives of Cat, Frankie and Tess, who have become even more complicated and more irresistible.

Old habits die hard as Cat puts her relationship on the line, lying to Sam. Frankie continues to cross dangerous boundaries and spiral downwards, leading us to wonder whether her past can keep her grounded and in Glasgow. Meanwhile, Tess has her hands full as she flirts with Internet dating, auditions for a major acting gig, and birthday celebrations—it's just too bad her party doesn't go quite the way she planned.

With an abundance of hot girl-on-girl action, Lip Service makes the L Word seem more like an afterschool special, and will leave you licking your lips in anticipation of season two.

Mary Lou

Eytan Fox

Israel 2010 video 150 min

Like the songs of Abba that carry the characters through the drama of Mamma Mia!, the sweet, idealistic pop songs of Israeli singer and composer Svika Pick carry two childhood friends through the glitter-soaked comic melodrama of Mary Lou.

Directed by Inside Out favourite Eytan Fox (The Bubble; Yossi & Jagger), this miniseries-cum-feature film follows Meir (Ido Rosenberg) in his search for his mother, who left home on his tenth birthday and never returned. His quest leads Meir to—where else?—a drag club in the hedonistic (and apolitical) bubble of Tel Aviv, where the boys are cute and the apartments are even cuter. His best friend Shuli and her hunky boyfriend eventually join him in his new life, though his father is a tougher sell.

Frothy, fun and packed with more song-and-dance numbers than an episode of Glee, the film will find you rooting for the sexy and likeable young leads as they wrestle with overlapping love triangles and who they really are. Even to the uninitiated, Pick's songs are undoubtedly catchy: his Diva, which won transsexual singer Dana International the 1998 Eurovision Song Contest, is one of Mary Lou's showstoppers. The series won Israel's national award for Best Miniseries in 2010.

Encore Screening: Christopher and His Kind

Geoffrey Sax

UK 2011 video 90 min

The decadent Berlin cabaret scene is in full swing when a young and wide-eyed Christopher Isherwood (author of The Single Man) arrives in the city to stay with his close friend and occasional lover, poet WH Auden.

To Isherwood's reserved English sensibility, the city's thriving gay subculture is intoxicating. But Christopher soon finds himself heartbroken after the failure of a hopeless love affair, and sets out on a process of self-discovery, forging an identity and a place for himself amid the chaos and carnality of 1930's Berlin.

Matt Smith, the young actor best known for his role in the British television series Doctor Who, stars as the aspiring writer who is escaping repressed English society for hedonistic, politically unstable Berlin. Isherwood eventually meets actress and singer Jean Ross, the inspiration for the character Sally Bowles, famously played by Liza Minnelli in the 1972 film, Cabaret, which, along with the Broadway musical, is based on Isherwood's The Berlin Stories.

In lavish period detail, the film transports us to the wild cabarets of Berlin and, occasionally, into the author's bedroom. Sexy and smart, Christopher and His Kind is sure to become another classic from the BBC.

The Night Watch

Richard Laxton

UK 2011 video 90 min

The latest adaptation of a Sarah Waters' novel, The Night Watch is a sweeping epic set against the turbulent backdrop of 1940s London. The film tells the stories of four young people—Kay, Helen, Viv and Duncan—who are inextricably linked by their wartime experiences. As air raid sirens wail, the friends find an invisible arena in which to explore their sexuality, discovering new freedom as they engage in secret liaisons and passionate trysts.

The Night Watch opens in 1947, with Britain trying to rebuild itself after the war. Kay roams the streets, haunted by personal loss, while Helen and Viv run a marriage bureau, helping people rebuild their shattered lives by finding love. But their own complicated love lives are less easy to solve. Helen obsessively clings to her tumultuous and volatile relationship with Julia, and Viv is unable to break free from her affair with a married man. Viv's vulnerable younger brother, Duncan, harbours a terrible secret, and when a man from his past reappears, his fragile existence is threatened.

Moving back in time into the middle of the Blitz, the film examines the lives, loves and losses of these four fragile characters. For each of them, post-war victory is bittersweet, thrusting them back to the margins of society, where, in order to build toward their future, they must each make peace with their past.
